HOW'S IT HANGIN' LIL' BROS?!

One of my favorite cartoon characters is Panda from We Bare Bears. Although I think Ice Bear is the coolest (Geddit? Geddit?), Pan-Pan is a romantic weirdo who best represents this month's issue of K-Zone. Plus, he and Po from Kung Fu Panda 3, who fronts this ish of KZ and is super silly himself, are the same type of bear (They should do a crossover!) and are quite funny when it comes to dealing with their daily probz. We're calling this the Oddball Issue because here at KZ HQ, embracing your uniqueness is a top priority. If you're strange and you know it, then let your freak flag fly! Don't let anyone dull down your light, bros. That's just wrong on so many levels! We've got features that celebrate your fave toon 'ships, steel your martial arts skills, and show you that hey, sometimes being different is totes awesome! This month of hearts, be like Po and Pan-Pan and don't be afraid to express your feelings for that special someone, whether it be a parent, a sib, or that cute girl in class who teases you on a daily basis. Whoever said that luurve is gross has no idea what they're talking about!

SCHWEET TOPICS THAT ARE ON FLEEK—LISTED

MEME OF THE MONTH: SHIA-MOJI

Shia LaBeouf has become a living emoji! The Transformers star filmed himself while watching a public screening of all his movies. The pictures of his mug went viral because he made so many facial expressions, he almost nailed all the emoji faces during the three-day movie marathon, which he sponsored. Oh, Shial!

HOW TO GET OVER A FRIENDZONE-INDUCED HEARTBREAK:

- Eat all the bacon!
- Blast a rock song, put on your socks, slide around the living room, and play air guitar!
- Go on a gaming marathon with your best bud. (Hopefully, this isn't the same person who friendzoned you.)

You try your best to be affectionate toward your crush but end up acting all tsundere (Read: cranky and defensive to hide your feels). Fail!

FRIGHT FEST

PLAYING WITH FIRE

BE CAREFUL NOT TO GET BURNED.

Martin met the girl in the old playground—the one that was built beside the ruins of the dilapidated school that had burned down 10 years ago. Her name was Lucia. Her hair was raven black and went all the way down to her knees, covering half her face, exposing just one eye and enough of her nose and mouth for him to appreciate her features. Her skin was so pale that Martin thought it kind of looked like snow, even if he'd never seen the real stuff in his life. Lucia wore a dress that was the color of eggshells with long sleeves that covered her frail arms. Martin was new in town and was desperate for a friend. And after wandering the empty streets of this strange place his parents had decided to move into after his father lost his job, he was just happy to finally have another kid he could talk to.

It was late in the afternoon and the playground just had enough sunlight to bathe the worn down swing, slide, monkey bars, and

Despite the creepiness of it all, Martin's curiosity took over. There she was. Small. Alone. Looking like she was in need of a playmate.

"Hello there!" he said when he first saw her sitting on the rickety swing, silent and staring at the ground beneath her feet.

"Hi," she solemnly replied, turning her head toward the boy in the way an old owl would in the guise of night. Martin immediately thought she was cute because she reminded him of a former classmate he once had a crush on. They introduced themselves and when Martin extended his hand for a shake, she met it with a tight grip. Her palm was unusually warm, hot even, and made Martin think of that time he accidentally touched a frying pan while his mom was cooking bacon.

"Do you want to play?" she asked, her voice meek in the way that most would describe as mousey.

"Sure! Let's do it!" Martin eagerly replied, finding joy in this peculiar little girl's invitation.

They both went down the slide, and before Martin even reached the end of it, he imagined it to be as exciting as the ones his family used to go on during trips to the local waterpark. He cheered Lucia on as she struggled to complete the monkey bars, surprised by her lack of enthusiasm despite all the fun they were having. And as they spun round and round on the rusty roundabout, the cold wind of twilight kissing their cheeks and the dust blinding their eyes, Martin couldn't help but stare at this odd girl with pale skin, eyes hiding behind her curtain-like tresses, and skin that radiated the kind of heat that could boil a pot of water for midnight mugs of hot cocoa.

"Faster! Faster! Faster!" she screamed, forcing Martin to push harder. The roundabout spun like a top out of control. In the dizzying madness of swirling colors, Martin could barely breathe. When he finally caught his breath, it was too late for him to save Lucia from flying off and falling hard on the prickly grass.

He ran to her as fast as he could. She lay on the ground, looking more disappointed than hurt. He held out his hand again, the same way he did when they had first met earlier, only it was to pull her up instead of exchange names. When their palms touched, there the heat was again, but this time it was Lucia's exposed arm that caught Martin's attention. Her flesh was black and bloody and in some parts seared down to the bone. Huge flies flew out of it as the smell of smoke took over the air. Martin immediately pulled his hand away and when Lucia glared at him, the hair that once cloaked her pretty face now exposed a half charred skull—mangled, mutilated, burned.

"Do you still want to play with me?" she asked, standing up to meet his worried gaze. Her face inches from his.

In the pupils of her eyes, he could see the flames. They were fiery, predatory even, as they consumed the old school whole. He could hear the tiny voices shrieking and wailing for help. He could feel the wooden beams succumbing to the tendrils of fire, crashing from above, and crushing those who were not lucky enough to get away. Martin was paralyzed by it all. Paralyzed by the heat. Paralyzed by the figure that was once his new friend before him. And before he could even answer Lucia's burning question, he knew that he was now hers to play with forever.

roundabout in the surrounding trees' looming shadows. Shadows that stretched like a thin man's arms, giving life to dark branches that resembled sharp claws. It didn't help that next to the playground was an empty lot barricaded by barbed wire, the remains of an ashen building resting like a forgotten corpse.

KUNG FU COMMANDMENTS

BEHOLD! THE SECRETS OF HOW TO BECOME A GREAT KUNG FU MASTER—REVEALED!

1 MORNING MEDITATION is a must. Before eating breakfast or taking a beating from the high kicks and hard strikes during training days, calm your mind by doing tai chi. Meditate and stay absolutely still. (Stop looking at the dumplings on the breakfast table, fool!)

2 Nothing beats PROPER NUTRITION. So don't fight off fresh fruits and veggies, bro! Tofu much? You can load up on noodle soup, dumplings, and fried wontons, too. Belly-goodah!

3 Early morning warmups are essential, so STRETCH FIRST. Your muscles will grow stronger and become more flexible.

4 PRACTICE YOUR BATTLEFACE. The deadpan face or the narrowed-eyes-with-teeth-baring stare are tried-and-tested looks. Try other fearless expressions that will intimidate the enemy. #NoFear

5 CHOOSE YOUR WEAPON. Shall you wield a sword, spear, staff, or saber? Why not learn how to use all of them? Multiweapon attacks will make you look at least 20% cooler.

6 FIND AND DEVELOP YOUR FIGHTING STYLE. If you're skinny, the Crane style might suit you—lots of hopping around, evading, and disguising attacks. But if you're as big as Po, Dragon Warrior style it is! Wataaaaah!

7 LEARN WHEN IT IS BETTER TO ATTACK LIGHTNING FAST AND HIT HARD, or when to dodge before you decide to strike back. Spar with different partners to build your confidence, so you're combat-ready.

8 PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT. It doesn't matter if you start out as a noob. Once the gong is struck, your mind will automatically enter a trancelike state and—behold!—you will seek discipline.

9 Compassion rules! ALWAYS HELP OTHERS TO BE THE BEST THEY CAN BE. A heart of gold—therein your power lies. #HeartOfGoldLikeButter

10 After every tiring and grueling day, ONE MUST GIVE TIME FOR RELAXATION. Tomorrow, you'll need to refocus and zigzag your way through more obstacles. Cuddle up with some bedtime reading of Sun Tzu's The Art of War. It's the bomb!

CLEANING YOUR SNEAKS

Keep your sneakers squeaky clean by using the following:

Saliva has the perfect consistency for cleaning stubborn stains. Just spit a good amount on the palm of your hand and use your finger to rub the stain off your sneaks. What's the best part? You can produce an unlimited supply of saliva absolutely for free!

Cooking Oil. Keep your kicks as shiny as your grandpa's bald head. How? Put some cooking oil in a cup and dip a clean sponge into the oil. Squeeze out the excess oil then wipe the oily sponge on your shoes. If you want your shoes to look super-shiny inside out, dip them in a bucket full of cooking oil—deep-fried chicken style!

Salt. Smelly shoes are no match for the cleaning powers of salt! It is believed to absorb moisture, which causes bacteria to breed, and is a natural antiseptic. Pour a generous amount of iodized salt onto the insides of your shoes and wait for 30 minutes before brushing the salt off. Don't throw away the salt! Put some on green mangoes and nom away. #WasteNot

GIVING WITHOUT SPENDING

It's the thought that counts, right?

HANDMADE WITH LOVE. Top last year's gift with... the biggest booger ball ever! For two months, harvest your boogers and roll them into one big ball. Keep it fresh by putting your booger ball inside a Ziploc bag then put it in the ref. Give your bag of boogers on your buddy's bday! Why you so sweet, bruh?

SPECIAL MIX.

Gather as much leftover chips and crackers and put them in a big, transparent Ziploc bag. Then put a sticker label on the bag that says "(Name of your friend) Mix."

A PIECE OF ME?

Make your gift more personal by giving them "pieces of you" stuffed inside a nice small box: strings of your hair (label it "locks of love"), toe and fingernail clippings, some day-old earwax, and your saliva in a small vial!

WHY
PROBLEMS THE NORMAL WAY
WHEN YOU CAN SOLVE THEM
THE WEIRD WAY?

NO PETS ALLOWED

So the 'rents won't allow you to keep animals as pets. Try these options:

THE ROCK. Get an odd-looking rock from your garden that you would like as a pet. Tie a leash around it then walk it around the neighborhood and give it a bath once a week. Pet rocks have feelings, too, so don't forget to play with them when you get back home from school, mmkay?

GOING BANANAS. Bananas are low-maintenance pets that don't require too much time and effort. You can just make it sit beside you all day and it would stay mellow and yellow!

Don't get too attached to them tho; they have a short life span. You'll know it's time to let go when they turn brown and mushy.

VEGGIE MATES. When you can't find the courage to chew a piece of broccoli to bits and end its existence, keep it as a pet instead! Tell Mom you've decided to save a precious vegetable's life. Plant it in a pot with soil and water it at least twice a day.

FARTING IN PUBLIC

Better out than in!

Be polite. If you let a big one rip inside an elevator, a small room, or car, do not panic. Stand absolutely still and pretend nothing happened. If someone tells you, "You stink!" Acknowledge them and say, "Why, thank you!"

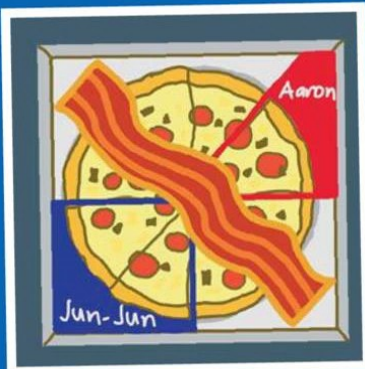

Deny to death. So you let a silent fart slip. You're sure no one notices the smell but then someone accuses you of farting. Whatever you do, don't admit it. Better yet, blame it on the tattletale!

Diversion tactic. After you fart, quickly move around the general area in a zigzag pattern in order to lose the smelly trail. Do a little dance so people will think you're just being weird.

SOLVING MATH PROBLEMS

WHAT IS 5 (5+3)? Bacon.

THERE ARE 8 SLICES OF PIZZA IN THE BOX. AARON GOT 2 WHILE JUN-JUN GOT 1. HOW MANY SLICES OF PIZZA ARE LEFT?

ALL THE SMALL THINGS

Yurie Koga A.K.A. Mozu, a 17-year-old Japanese high school student, has mad diorama-making skills! He created a 1/6 scale diorama of his bedroom, a bookstore, and a telephone pole. His miniature works of art look so unreal! We can't wait to see what he'll do next. Yo, Mozu, can you make a diorama of the Shibuya Scramble in Japan? Or better yet, the KZ HQ in Manila!

MACHOKE AND MACHAMP: NO PANTS!

Fact: these Pokémon Red and Blue fighting champs are actually not wearing any clothes! According to an official statement by Sayaka, one of the Pokémon virtual gym instructors, those things on their hips are markings—like spots on a Dalmatian! Surprised much? C'mon! Pokémon don't wear clothes!

ROCK, PAPER (SORRY, NO SCISSORS)

Signal Snowboards and Ernest Packaging collaborated to make a working cardboard model of a Fender Stratocaster. This one-of-a-kind, recyclable electric guitar works perfectly and is rock-star approved!

QUICK DRAW

STEP 1: START TRAINING

Lightly sketch the form of Master Shifu using a pencil. Both his head and ears are oval-shaped, while the robe wrapped around his body and his sleeves are cone-shaped. Draw thin ovals for his hands and cylinders for his legs. Sketch his tail by drawing a big oval just below his raised left leg.

STEP 2: USE YOUR HEAD

Draw Master Shifu's long and bushy eyebrows just above the eyeline. Next, draw his eyes and shade in the inner circle to make his eyeballs. Draw a small circle for his nose then sketch a long line beside each side of his nose for his whiskers. Use half circles and lines to add details to his furry head and ears. Finally, draw his cheeks and ponytail beard last.

STEP 3: DRESSED TO KILL

STEP 4: ARM STRENGTH

Draw the visible part of his arms then draw a wave design on each cuff. Master Shifu's right hand is pointing down, while his left hand is pointing up. Draw long, thin lines for his fingers and some short lines on his arms for his fur.

STEP 5: STAND UP AND FIGHT

Draw his bent left leg using circles and semi-circles. Sketch the visible part of his right leg using cylinders. Next, add small rectangles for his knee-high bandages. Lastly, draw his small kung fu slippers.

HOW TO DRAW

MASTER SHIFU

STEP 6: TAIL OF A LEGEND

Master Shifu's tail is two-toned. Add four curved lines near the narrow end of his tail then one line near the broad end.

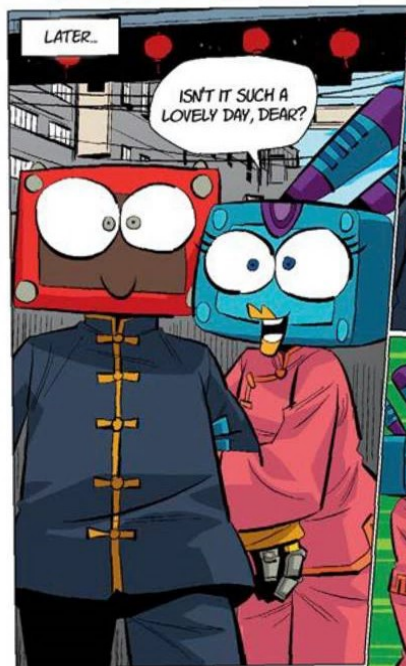

STEP 7: 'SUP, SENSEI

Trace over all your pencil marks using a pen. After the ink has dried completely, erase all your pencil marks and add color. Master Shifu's ears are white and brown. His face is mostly white. Add a hint of brown for the rings around his eyes. His right sleeve is brown, while the rest of his robe is green. The clasp of his robe is gold, and the wave designs on the cuffs are yellow. His hands and legs are dark brown, and his tail is white with brown stripes. Use different shades of color to add depth to your drawing. Aaaaand you're done! How did we do, Master Shifu?

Mirei and Rina are originally from Digimon World Re: Digitize. The Japanese game has yet to be translated to English.

Digimon Story: Cyber Sleuths is set in the near future when everything is so high-tech, everyone can digitize themselves and travel to an awesome metaphysical realm called EDEN. You must gather as many Digimons as you can to stop evil hackers from causing a disturbance in the digital world. For most of the game, you can freely travel between the "real" world and the virtual world and visit famous locations in Tokyo or explore EDEN while kicking monster butt!

DOMINATE THOSE BATTLES

Satisfy your hunger for Digimon destruction with intense monster battles!

The battle system is similar to turn-based JRPGs. In every battle, you can choose and command your own team of monsters that have different classes and abilities. However, if you want to win against the monstrosities you'll meet in EDEN, you need to choose the right mix of minions that will help you defeat the enemy.

DIGIMON DIVERSITY

Not all Digimon are created equal!

This game is way better than the previous titles because the Digimon types are more complex. Every Digimon is assigned an attribute (Vaccine, Data, Virus) and an element (Fire, Water, Plant, Electricity, etc). Use these elements and attributes to make strategic decisions, from building your roster of Digimon to finding the best ways to use their abilities in battle.

PRO-TIP

To completely annihilate your opponent, figure out the enemy's weaknesses then attack with the perfect Digimon. FTW!

GAMER'S HELP DESK

Nikolai Gilbert Ordon

What troops should I get to create a powerful army in CoC?

Hi, Nikolai! A strong and powerful army is composed of Giants, Wall Breakers, and lots of Barbarians. If you have reached Town Hall 6, get some Wizards as your main attackers. Then at Town Hall 7 onwards, you'll need Hog Riders and Dragons to destroy your enemy's defense towers.

TIP TRIP

K-Zoner Brian de Ocampo shares a tip for the 3DS game Pokémon X.

To increase your chances of getting a shiny Pokémon, use the Masuda Method where you will need to babysit two of the same Pokémon from different countries in the Day Care Center. When your two Pokémon produce an egg, there's a six in 4,096 chance that the Pokémon you get will be a shiny. Good luck, dudes!

DYK? Each world in the Pokémon games is based on a real place! Kalos, for example, is patterned after France.

TOPSY TURVY

While your bro is away, go to his room and carefully turn upside down as many things as you can—chairs, toys, picture frames, clocks, anything! When your bro comes home and sees his room, he'll be totally confused!

SWEET TOOTH

Go to the kitchen and remove all the forks, knives, and spoons from the cutlery drawer. Then fill the sections with different kinds of lollies!

TIME BOMB

This prank is a bit messy so pull it outside of the house. Freeze some chewy mints in ice cubes. When they're ready, put the special ice cubes in a glass, fill it with soda, and offer it to a friend or sib. Chat him up so he won't finish his drink in one gulp. When the ice melts and the mints react to the soda, the liquid will fizz out like an exploding volcano!
